

Gamecock Consulting Club

New Member Onboarding

Fall 2023

Overview

Congratulations on earning your status as a prospective new member of the Gamecock Consulting Club. In order to become full members of good standing, each prospective new member is expected to complete New Member Onboarding, hereafter referred to as NMO. This process is designed to accomplish the following objectives.

- A comprehensive baseline knowledge of what consulting firms do, what a consultant does, the types of consulting available, examples of firms that might interest you, and the pros/cons of a career in consulting.
- An awareness of why you may or may not want to pursue a career in consulting
- An organized understanding of the semester-by-semester steps they would need to take to earn their target career(s) in consulting.
- A comprehensive understanding of what GCC offers to its members and how it may contribute to your professional goals.
- Prospective new members have made the acquaintance of several current GCC members.
- A baseline knowledge of what it is like to do a case interview and how to get better at them.
- Prospective new members are, at the conclusion of NMO, representative of GCC's standards of quality and professionalism in their interactions with alumni or potential employers.

NMO is broken down into 5 weeks / 4 meetings + 1 case competition, where you will prepare to become a full member of good standing in the Gamecock Consulting Club. There are exceptions granted for those who proactively communicate extenuating circumstances. Otherwise, failure to meet the requirements listed in this document within these 4 weeks will result in removal from the organization.

Deadline System

There will be a deadline system put in place to administer consequences of failing to meet NMO requirements.

Deadline System

- 1st missed deadline: meeting with member of NMOC
- 2nd missed deadline: meeting with member of NMOC + vote to drop within a week of the missed deadline

Missed deadlines are unexcused meeting absences and missed due dates. Each assignment that you fail to complete by the due date counts as a missed deadline. For example, if you fail to complete both the resume and cover letter draft due on the same day, this would count as two missed deadlines.

Prospective new members are empowered to call a special meeting with the NMOC to apply for a reduced version of NMO requirements. The reduced version must earn the unanimous approval of the NMOC.

A vote to drop will be held by a council consisting of the NMOC and GCC executive board. No more than one absence is allowed for the vote to be valid. The prospective new member in question is permitted to have a 10-minute discussion with the council concerning the circumstances that contributed to their failure to meet NMO requirements. Following this discussion, the council must come to a first-time $\frac{2}{3}$ consensus to revoke the status of said prospective new member. If a $\frac{2}{3}$ consensus cannot be achieved, the prospective new member will continue NMO until the next missed deadline, at which point the council will repeat this process.

Formal Review

Formal review will be conducted by a council consisting of the NMOC and GCC executive board. Good standing membership classification will be granted to those prospective new members who earn at least 75% of the council's vote.

Special Circumstances

Prospective new members are empowered to call a special meeting with the NMOC to apply for a reduced version of NMO requirements. The reduced version must earn the unanimous approval of the NMOC. We understand that extenuating circumstances arise. We simply ask that you proactively communicate your challenges to the NMO as soon as possible.
