Dear Deutsche Bank,

Thank you for considering me for the 2025 internship position of the Investment Bank: Corporate Finance Capital Markets Division.

After the privilege of meeting Mariclare McEntire at an on campus recruitment event, I learned about her role as an associate in CLO Syndicate for the Fixed Income & Currencies Division and instantly took great interest in Deutsche Bank's diverse culture.

I am currently a sophomore in the University of South Carolina's Darla Moore School of Business with a 3.9 GPA majoring in Finance and Risk Management with a Sustainability in Business Concentration. I chose the Darla Moore School of Business for the incredible opportunities offered by both students and faculty alike. From my first day in the business school, I aspired to join organizations that would help me grow professionally and personally.

To this end, I joined the Carolina Finance and Investment Association which aims to immerse its members in the different roles of finance. Ultimately, my greatest interest was and is in Fixed Income and Currency Roles. This was reinforced for me when upon the suggestion of some of my peers, I completed the Bloomberg Market Concepts course where I was introduced to FX reserves and the concepts of currency pegging, as well as other underlying economic drivers.

This experience was crucial in preparing me for my school's highly selective, case-based finance curriculum where accepted students, in preparation for the advanced coursework, attended a three-day bootcamp where I further developed my knowledge of Bloomberg Terminal. I learned to view important market information such as bond and commodity prices, as well as currency exchange rates. I was enamored by the ability to mitigate risk through the utilization of creative investment strategies that could consist of several types of securities. My greatest interest is in Fixed Income and Currency roles because it offers a career path for me to combine my affinity towards numbers and data analysis with the creativity required to develop unique and effective risk management strategies.

In speaking with Mariclare, she emphasized the diverse and inclusive culture that inspired her to join the Deutsche Bank team. After learning of the success of Deutsche Bank's diversity initiatives and how they are an intrinsic component of the internship experience, I was left at ease knowing that if I were awarded an internship opportunity, not only would I be able to grow professionally, but personally as well by being a part of a diverse team where differences are embraced and seen as a constructive and powerful force for growth.

I would be honored to be on your team and to have the opportunity to begin my finance career in the 2025 internship program of the Investment Bank: Corporate Finance Capital Markets Division at Deutsche Bank.

Sincerely,

Leo Goldberg
