

People you can reach out to

Riley and others in your network

Show all

About the job

Job Description Summary

Prepares economic, financial or statistical research and analysis for use in the development of business strategies and tactics. Has excellent theoretical and practical knowledge of different financial and analytical techniques, and the capability to plan own work and meet deadlines.

Job Description

Responsibilities: Carry out feasibility and assessment work for proposed and current projects to contribute to the development and continuous review of business cases. Produce accurate reports for others by collecting data from a variety of standard sources and inputting it into standard formats. Support others by carrying out a range of economic research activities. Provide basic financial modeling input into business cases, costs, and schedules to support growth in the business. Extract and combine data to generate standard reports. Use data management systems to access specific information as and when required. Support the development and delivery of financial policies, guidelines, and protocols to ensure the company complies with regulations and good financial practice. Resolve complex queries from internal or external customers or suppliers by providing information on policies and/or procedures, referring the most complex issues to others. Develop own capabilities by participating in assessment and development planning activities as well as formal and informal training and coaching. Develop and maintain an understanding of relevant technology, external regulation, and industry best practices through ongoing education, attending conferences, and reading specialist media. Provide information and clarification on existing procedures, processes, and precedents. Conduct routine tasks of preparing and disseminating financial reporting aligning with the organization's established protocols. Skills: Works without supervision and provides technical guidance when required on analyzing data trends for use in reports to help guide decision making. Works with guidance (but not constant supervision) to develop appropriate plans or perform necessary actions based on recommendations and requirements. Works under guidance (but not constant supervision) to acquire, organize, protect and process data to fulfill business